Day Tour
Egypt
Aswan

If you are one of those people passionate about history and ancient civilization, Egypt is the perfect destination to enjoy every moment of your vacation learning more about this enchanting land whose antiquities have baffled the world until now.

Your tour will begin with an unforgettable visit to the Temple of Kom Ombo. The name “Kom Ombo” came from two parts; the first part is "Kom," meaning hill, and the second is "Ombo," a corruption of “Anbu” or "Nabu,” meaning gold, as this area controlled the roads leading to the gold mines, as it was known in Egyptian texts as "Ba-Sobek," meaning the seat of Sobek, who was worshiped in it since pre-dynastic times.

The Temple of Kom Ombo is characterized by the beautiful capitals of the columns; it also features magnificent landscapes adorning its walls. It lists the calendar of festivals and other religious activities, along with their dates and accompanying rituals. Work on this temple continued until the reign of the emperors “Caracalla, Geta, and Macrinus,” that is, until 218 AD, so the Kom Ombo temple took almost a quarter of a hundred years to build.

After that, we will start another adventure to the beautiful Temple of Edfu. Edfu is located about 105 km from Aswan, but it has the best-preserved temple in Egypt, and it is one of the landmarks that all those interested and passionate about antiquities are keen to see. The temple was built over the reign of six Ptolemies and was dedicated to the worship of the god Horus, who has the head of a falcon, and the main building with a great colonnade.

The Temple of Edfu, or the Temple of Horus, is the second largest temple in ancient Egypt, after the Temple of Karnak, located in the city of Edfu in Upper Egypt on the west bank of the Nile River, which was known during the Hellenistic period as (?????????? ??????) and in Latin (Apollonopolis Magna), representing one of the last attempts by the Ptolemies to build temples in the style of their ancestors in form and grandeur. The Temple of Horus took about 180 years to build.
