Modern Alamein abounds with historical connotation in its contemporary development, attesting to the immense role that Egypt has played thus far in matters concerning World War II and in further growth: Alamein City was inaugurated officially by President Abdel Fattah El-Sisi in March 2018; located west of Borg Al-Arab International Airport on the Mediterranean coast. Lying between Matrouh and Alexandria, it is a new development center complete with a presidential palace, government buildings, and plans for three major universities and fifteen skyscrapers.

El Alamein is an important place in world history because of the two major battles fought here during World War II. The Battle of El Alamein, as it is more famously known, fought in 1942, turned the tide of the North African campaign. This first battle lasted 27 days, after which there was a successful 13-day counterattack by the Allies, forcing the Axis powers to withdraw to Tunisia. The fighting had claimed the lives of some 13,000 Allied soldiers, while more than 70,000 others were injured.

El Alamein comprises its historical legacy with a very coherent vision for the future, making it essentially destined for history enthusiasts and avid travelers to witness the dynamic transformation of Egypt. Explore its fascinating past and the amazingly thriving present with our expert-guided tours.
