Cairo

Enjoy the Tanoura show and performances by spiritual music and Sufi dance groups, as well as folk groups like the Egyptian folk instruments team, which includes the most skilled musicians in Egypt playing traditional instruments. There are also performances by Nubian drum groups that present the ancient Nubian heritage to preserve the musical and rhythmic heritage that originated from the Nile River, along with heritage shows and dance tableaux presented by the national folk arts troupe.

The Tanoura Heritage Troupe, which performs its famous performances every Saturday and Wednesday of every week, attracts dozens of Arab and foreign tourists throughout the year in large numbers, to enjoy the artistic performances that rely on the dancer's skills in using and shaping skirts and their physical fitness with the use of musical phrases and various fast rhythms through folk musical instruments.

The collection still stands tall on both sides of Al-Moez Street, the world's largest open-air museum, where tourists from different cultures and nationalities flock to enjoy its architecture and decorations by day, and its cultural and artistic meals by night.

Tourists can visit the Dome and learn about these arts, and get up close and personal with Egyptian creators, in continuous evenings and evenings organised by the Egyptian Ministry of Culture, represented by the Cultural Development Fund, in cooperation with some cultural and artistic institutions.

These evenings and parties are attended by a group of Egyptian minstrels and musical, percussion and show bands that reflect the different regions and cultures of Egypt, most notably the Samaa Ensemble for Religious Chanting, which preserves heritage by reviving ancient templates such as the art of performing rare tawashihs and maqamat with a contemporary vision.

Al Tanoura Folklore Dance Show Night Tour

Our driver will wait for you in front of your hotel in Cairo or Giza around six o'clock to take you to Al Ghori Agency, a few steps away from the Qubba and near Al Azhar Mosque, Al Ghori Agency, established in 909 AH - 1503 AD, which was used as a commercial center, where Egyptian merchants and visitors from other countries would meet.

The agency consists of five floors, with an open rectangular courtyard in the center, where the five floors wrap around the courtyard. The first and second floors were used as shops for the sale and storage of goods, while the upper floors housed independent residences for merchants. The southern façade is the main façade of the agency and has the main entrance.

Since the end of 2000, the agency entered a five-year restoration project. In 2005, the Ghori Agency reopened its doors as an archaeological site and a cultural center, the Ghori Agency Centre for Traditional Arts, which works for the cultural and human development of the Islamic Cairo region by providing cultural services.

The center used to host performances by the Tanoura Heritage Troupe, but the coronavirus pandemic stopped those performances inside the agency and moved them to its neighbouring Al Ghori Dome.

One of the cultural services within the agency is its 'ceremonies' for visual artists, in which they create their paintings inspired by the heritage atmosphere that envelops the place. After the show, you will be transferred to your hotel.
