-Visit the Valley Temple of Chephren, which was created from the bedrock and is believed to be the place where the mummification of the royal body took place as part of the funeral rituals.

-Next, visit the area known as Saqqara, the necropolis of an earlier period roughly 200 years before the great kings who built the three pyramids in Giza. See the first-ever stone pyramid, built by the genius architect Imhotep for his King Djoser. The Step Pyramid in Saqqara is great evidence of the development of the pyramid-building process, as it is composed of six rectangular steps above each other, with a burial pit underneath by means of 20 meters.

-You'll also have the chance to enter the pyramid of King Teti, who ruled Egypt during the 6th dynasty, and get fascinated by the tomb of his son-in-law Kagemni.
