The god Amun-Ra's holy boat was located in the central compartment, his wife Mut's sacred boat was located in the western, and the moon god Khonsu's son's sacred boat was located in the eastern.

Temple of Karnak:

The smallest of the ten structures, it was constructed in the west by King Tuthmosis III. It is regarded as a compass because it is a granite column in the north with an engraving of a lotus flower that was growing in Lower Egypt on top, and a papyrus plant that was growing in Upper Egypt on the south opposite it.

The Valley of the Kings is divided into the eastern and western valleys.

Temple of Hatshepsut:

Queen Hatshepsut constructed the monastery to carry out rites that would help her in the afterlife. After the Copts used this temple as their monastery in the seventh century AD, the region was given the contemporary Arabic name Deir al-Bahari. The temple is made up of three terraces that rise and fall, connected by ramps.

Memnon's Colosi:

On the western bank of Thebes, now known as Luxor, lies the statue of Memnon. Numerous Pharaonic monuments in Luxor, one of the most popular tourist destinations, are connected to the ancient Egyptian civilization from thousands of years ago.
